Press release

In the areas of the world where our^ Revolver Co-operative draws upon natural resources such as coffee, the producer's communities are often remote, rural, isolated and impoverished.

The world's finest arabica coffees are grown at altitude in countries close to the tropics. The farming communities themselves, are largely organised as cooperatives.

Our cooperative sources 97% of all its products under Fairtrade agreements, but we want to go beyond Fairtrade in terms of our outreach into communities. For this reason, we have created *Revolver World Foundation. Together with like-minded cooperative societies, we are looking to make social change in these remote rural communities, predominantly in Latin America, but also Africa and Indonesia.

We have identified that one way our giving can bring significant rewards, is with small interventions in public health, in the form of funding (but not administering) vaccines. These vaccines can be for a range of disease preventions across the spectrum of known pathogens.

The most effective means for us to intervene is to fund the vaccines themselves. To work with medics on the ground to establish the need, and to fund these medics to administer immunisation programmes for the community. The medics themselves may be established already in the community, or in certain cases an NGO such as MSF.

The vaccines can be for a range of disease preventions such as Typhoid, Yellow fever, Cholera, Pneumonia, Hepatitis b, Rabies, Polio, MMR, Meningococcal, Tetanus, COVID 19 (when available) and seasonal Flu.
